BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, May 12—The Allies made a plea today to four satellite Axis nations to break their ties with the promise that in so doing they will enjoy terms less harsh than unconditional surrender.

A formal statement was addressed by the governments of the United States, Great Britain and Russia to Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland urging those countries to withdraw from the war and cease collaboration with Germany.

By so doing, the three-power statement said, the satellite nations will "diminish their own ultimate sacrifices and contribute to the Allied victory." If the four Axis-leagued countries refuse to accept the terms offered in today's note, it was emphasized they must suffer "disastrous consequences."

LONDON, May 12—One of the greatest cross-channel air offensives of the war was launched by huge formations of American and British bombers today following night-long assaults against targets in France and Belgium.

Correspondents stationed along the south and east coasts of England described as "earth-shaking" the bombardments carried out against vital German anti-invasion areas along the French side of the channel.

"Extraordinarily large" numbers of American fighter planes participated in the new daylight assaults, which carried the aerial offensive against Nazi Europe into its 28th consecutive day. Marauders of the Ninth Air Force, escorted by speedy Thunderbolt fighters, hit airfields and other military objectives in France during the night.

Scioto Vote Under Probe By Hummel

Tom Herbert Asks Accurate
Count Of Ballots By Republicans

PORTSMOUTH, May 12—Two special investigators in the office of Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel today investigated alleged voting irregularities in Scioto county in Tuesday's Republican gubernatorial primary elections.

Investigators Fred Snyder, Springfield, and Jack Baxter, Youngstown, were sent by Hummel to Portsmouth yesterday at the request of Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert, who lost the Republican nomination for governor by slightly more than 2,000 votes. Hummel ordered all ballots and poll books impounded and ordered any official count to be stopped.

In a letter to Hummel, Herbert asserted he was acting "in order that any further irregularities may be avoided and an accurate and correct count of the primary vote insured."

Election board officials said they believed the indication of "alleged irregularities" may have resulted from the fact the first 10 precincts counted in Scioto county gave an average of 47 1/2 Republican votes to the precinct, while the last 92 contained an average of 75. There are a total of 102 precincts in the county.

Herbert lost the nomination to Mayor James Garfield Stewart of Cincinnati after a rapid climb in the late tabulation that whittled down a Stewart lead that once reached nearly 21,000. The official county vote was Stewart 3,734, and Herbert 1,599.

LACKS STOMACH BUT PHYSICIAN EATS AND WORKS

NEW YORK, May 12—Accomplishments of modern surgery were clearly evident today in the case of an elderly doctor who works hard and eats three meals a day despite the removal of his stomach two years ago.

He was presented at the closing session of the Medical Society of the state of New York. In the surgical removal of the physician's stomach, a loop of his small intestine was made to supplant that vital digestive organ, said Dr. Frank H. Lahey, director of the Lahey clinic, Boston.

Dr. Norman Treves, of New York, told the doctors that they should never relinquish hope for a patient who suffers ostensibly from incurable cancer.

Even against hopeless odds, he explained, a patient's attitude and the chance of recovery may change completely if his mental outlook is bolstered by hope, Dr. Treves declared.

ADMITS SLAYING, BUT GRAND JURY REFUSES CHARGE

CHICAGO, May 12—Edmund O'Dea, 30, an unemployed bartender, was free today despite his confession that he shot and killed a man and the recommendation of a coroner's jury that he be held on a murder charge.

The grand jury voted a no bill in the case—a finding that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant an indictment.

Following his arrest, O'Dea told authorities he had slain Louis Heller, 34, formerly of New York, on May 3, while the two struggled for possession of Heller's gun.

PRESIDENT TO "TAKE IT EASY"

Official Duties Curtailed
To Follow Pattern Of Part Work-Part Rest

WASHINGTON, May 12—President Roosevelt, it was disclosed today, is going to "take it easy" for the next few weeks following his four-week rest-cure in the sun at Bernard M. Baruch's South Carolina plantation.

The chief executive's official duties are being considerably curtailed to follow a pattern of "part work-part rest."

Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's personal physician, has advised him not to resume, for the time being, the fast pace of work and the 18-hour day which has characterized the President's tremendous drive and energy over the last few years.

A daily routine has been worked out that will permit the President to get all of his necessary official duties done, but at the same time will afford him sufficient rest and sunshine.

The new regime is aimed at keeping Mr. Roosevelt in the excellent state of health with which he returned to Washington after his month's rest in the sun and salt air.

For years past, the President has led literally a "killing pace." He has put in an 18-hour day consistently. During the pre-war crisis years, and especially since Pearl Harbor, the executive virtually had never stopped for adequate rest.

The result was that when the President fell victim of the influenza epidemic which swept the country last year, he was unable to get back on his feet.

BARKLEY BACKS ROOSEVELT FOR FOURTH TERM

NEW YORK, May 12—Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky was on record today as supporting a fourth term for President Roosevelt because the President is the "best qualified man" under present world conditions.

"I am not afraid of a fourth term," Barkley declared in the current issue of Collier's. "There can be no such thing as a dictatorship, which some honest people fear and others pretend to fear, so long as the American people have the right of a free choice. There is no pretense anywhere that they do not have a free choice."

Barkley, who broke temporarily with the President over the latter's veto of the tax bill, said Mr. Roosevelt would prefer not to serve again in the White House if the world were at peace.

INDIRECT RED, ROMANIA PEACE TALK RUMORED

NEW YORK, May 12—"Indirect" peace negotiations between Romania and the Soviet Union were reported "apparently" under way today on the basis of Russian Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov's statement to the Axis satellite April 2.

The Algiers radio, quoting a dispatch by an information service allied with the French Committee of National Liberation, said Soviet conditions include:

- 1—The Romanian army must capitulate or turn against the Germans;
- 2—Bessarabia and Bucovina to be returned to Russia;
- 3—The Vienna award regarding Transylvania to be annulled in favor of Romania; and
- 4—Romania to pay the Soviet Union a war indemnity to be determined later.

NEW YORK, May 12—Miracle-Maker Henry J. Kaiser has done it again.

He disclosed today that since he took over the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. seven months ago he has:

- Boosted its output of navy fighter planes 344 percent.
- Increased production schedules at Brewster's New York and Johnsville, Pa. plants from a point 27 percent behind schedule to 25.2 percent ahead.
- Cut the labor force 33 percent.
- Reduced absenteeism from 13 percent to five percent.
- Reduced the man-hours required to build a plane from 27,000 to 9,000.

FEDERAL GIRLS RAP UNCLE SAM

Low Wages, Poor Living Conditions Stir Wrath
Of Young Women

WASHINGTON, May 12—Government girls said today that the rapidity with which girls are leaving Uncle Sam's employ is equalled only by their lack of respect for the government after they have worked for it.

Employees contrasted the solicitude of war plants and private industry in general for the comfort and welfare of employees with the attitude of Uncle Sam's overseers.

The most frequent complaints are that promotions are impossible, slow, sub-living wages are paid, there is misrepresentation in civilian recruiting, there is too much inter-departmental politics and their officers are overrun by vermin.

Employees of the Departments of State, Labor, Agriculture and Commerce, the War Production Board, OPA and the Bureau of the Budget complain that mice, sometimes rats, and household insects of all kinds are lodged in their offices and desks despite their efforts to get rid of them with insect powder and poison.

They declare that requests for exterminations are countered with explanations by supervisors that Washington is "naturally damp" and that nothing can be done about the situation.

Workers in the Department of Commerce buildings attributed lack of promotions and raises to official "stinginess."

New Program Designed To Fill Service Needs From
Draftees Under 26

UNESSENTIALS SLATED

Men More Than 26 Helping War Effort May Remain
In Civilian Life

WASHINGTON, May 12—The nation's 6,400 selective service boards inaugurated a new draft program today designed to fill military manpower needs for the next six months from men under 26 and such older men as are not "necessary" to or "participating" in essential war activities.

National Selective Service Chief Lewis B. Hershey expressed belief that the "now relatively small" needs of the armed forces can be met in this manner, as he revoked a flat ban on inductions of men 26 and over and laid down a new set of rules for handling such registrants.

The first task for the local boards is to review the cases of one million 650 thousand 1-A's 26 years of age or over and sort out those necessary or contributing to the war effort for retention in civilian life.

Service Picture
Maj. Gen. Hershey decreed "liberal treatment" for men 30 years old or over in sizing up the selective service picture as follows:

1. The prospect for registrants 30 through 37 is that they will remain in civilian life for "an indefinite period" while regularly engaged in activities in war production or in support of the war effort.

2. The prospect for registrants 26 through 29 who are found to be "necessary" to the war effort is that they will remain in civilian life "for the time being."

3. The prospect for registrants 18 through 25 is "service in the armed forces" unless they meet rigid deferment standards.

Hershey said "we think we can produce enough men from those under 26 and the other two classes" to meet calls for the next six months. The "other two classes" are men 26 through 29 who are not "necessary" to essential war activities and those 30 or over who are not participating in such work.

Calls To Slow
However, such registrants will benefit "for the time being" from the fact that draft calls have diminished. Boards will call men more slowly and will make more use of youths becoming 18. An (Continued on Page Two)

VICE-ADMIRAL DERRIEN DRAWS LIFE SENTENCE

ALGIERS, May 12—Vice-Admiral Edmond Louis Derrien, charged with treason for surrendering the Bizerte naval base and 16 French warships to the Germans, was sentenced today to life imprisonment.

TWO GRANDMOTHERS IN WAR SERVICE AS WACS

FORT SHERIDAN, Ill., May 12—Two WACS who are grandmothers are stationed at Fort Sheridan, it was learned today. They are Staff Sgt. Marie T. Sublett, of Springfield, Ill., a former social worker and Corp. Bessie Robinson, of New York City.

The Fort Sheridan public relations office, when asked for the ages of the WAC grandmothers, replied: "That, in the case of WACS, is always a military secret."

The age limit for WAC enlistments is 49.

The four-day-old babe was in such a genial mood at the time it took a lusty wallopp from the nurse to get him to sound off his best squawk.

HITLER GIVES DEFENSE ORDERS

Fuehrer Plans Last-Minute
Personal Inspection
Of Atlantic Wall

LONDON, May 12—Hitler was reported today to be planning a last-minute personal inspection of the German defenses in Western Europe after Nazi commanders along the Atlantic wall were said to have received final instructions on the part they were to play in combating invasion.

The report of Hitler's planned visit to the so-called invasion coast was published in the London Daily Sketch which said that the reichsfuehrer may even be there today.

Underground channels were quoted by the Sketch as reporting that elaborate preparations had been made "in secret" during the last few days for the visit of the Nazi leader.

The German high command, according to the military writer of the Daily Herald, has completed anti-invasion plans. Commanding generals have been chosen, the writer said, and troops have been sent to their stations and given their last orders.

Only D-day is now awaited, it was said.

Three armies were said to have been massed by the Germans as an anti-invasion force, including occupation troops from all over Western Europe and occupied countries.

Neutral military observers were said to calculate that Rommel now has massed seven complete panzer divisions, including the Adolf Hitler division which was mauled almost beyond recognition in Russia but now has been refitted and brought up to strength.

ISOLATED JAP UNITS ON MANUS BEING ERASED

NEW YORK, May 12—"Isolated" groups of Japanese troops are still resisting on Manus island in the Admiralty group but are being "gradually mopped up," the Melbourne radio said today.

BULLETIN

ABOARD A U. S. FORTRESS OVER ITALY, May 12—The Allied Mediterranean Air Force put on a record display of power today in support of the new ground offensive on the Italian battlefield, smashing targets all the way from Cassino to the Brenner Pass.

By International News Service
The Allied Fifth and Eighth armies in Italy opened a general offensive today against the strongly defended German Gustav line barring the road to Rome after loosing the greatest artillery assault of the war against the Nazis.

Aimed big guns hurled thousands of shells into the enemy ranks in what may prove to be the biggest barrage in all history while overhead swarms of Mediterranean air force and tactical air force bombers battered the German positions.

Armored units immediately plunged into breaches in the enemy line against stiff German resistance.

Initial reports from the front said that the battle was going well in favor of the Allies.

The main force of the Allied armies was concentrated on the German defense in the Liri valley, through which the Via Cassina leads to Rome.

Levelled By Bombs

The entire front from the embattled Nazi stronghold of Cassino which was levelled in an all-out aerial bombardment by American heavyweight bombers westward to the Tyrrhenian sea was ablaze with action.

The Eighth Army was brought into the fray after moving secretly across the Apennine mountains for a smash against the Liri valley defenses.

British, Dominion, Indian and Polish troops were among the leading assault formations of the Eighth Army troops taking part in the action.

The Fifth Army commanded by Gen. Mark W. Clark struck northward against Cassino.

If the Allies succeed in cracking the Gustav line the Germans will be forced to drop back to the Adolf Hitler line some 10 miles behind the present forward line.

At exactly 11 o'clock last night every Allied gun along the Gustav line fired simultaneously. At the same moment American, British, Canadian, Polish and French troops attacked along the entire length of the line.

The onslaught marked the climax of the Italian campaign.

All indications were that the (Continued on Page Two)

Tom Herbert Asks Accurate Count Of Ballots By Republicans

PORTSMOUTH, May 12—Two special investigators in the office of Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel today investigated alleged voting irregularities in Scioto county in Tuesday's Republican gubernatorial primary elections.

There were exactly that number of passengers in an elevator of the Capitol hotel in New York early today when it stopped suddenly between the first and second floors, causing the cover plate of the car to fall.

Only two of the passengers refused medical attention after the accident. No one was injured seriously.

DRAFT CALLS OF NEXT HALF YEAR BECKON YOUTHS

New Program Designed To Fill Service Needs From Draftees Under 26

UNESSENTIALS SLATED

Men More Than 26 Helping War Effort May Remain In Civilian Life

WASHINGTON, May 12—The nation's 6,400 selective service boards inaugurated a new draft program today designed to fill military manpower needs for the next six months from men under 26 and such older men as are not "necessary" to or "participating" in essential war activities.

National Selective Service Chief Lewis B. Hershey expressed belief that the "now relatively small" needs of the armed forces can be met in this manner, as he revoked a flat ban on inductions of men 26 or over and laid down a new set of rules for handling such registrants.

The first task for the local boards is to review the cases of one million 650 thousand 1-A's 26 years of age or over and sort out those necessary or contributing to the war effort for retention in civilian life.

Service Picture

Maj. Gen. Hershey decreed "liberal treatment" for men 30 years old or over in sizing up the selective service picture as follows:

1. The prospect for registrants 30 through 37 is that they will remain in civilian life for "an indefinite period" while regularly engaged in activities in war production or in support of the war effort.
2. The prospect for registrants 26 through 29 who are found to be "necessary" to the war effort is that they will remain in civilian life "for the time being."
3. The prospect for registrants 18 through 25 is "service in the armed forces" unless they meet rigid deferment standards.

Hershey said "we think we can produce enough men from those under 26 and the other two classes" to meet calls for the next six months. The "other two classes" are men 26 through 29 who are not "necessary" to essential war activities and those 30 or over who are not participating in such work.

Calls To Slow

However, such registrants will benefit "for the time being" from the fact that draft calls have diminished. Boards will call men more slowly and will make more use of youths becoming 18. An (Continued on Page Two)

VICE-ADMIRAL DERRIEN DRAWS LIFE SENTENCE

ALGIERS, May 12—Vice-Admiral Edmond Louis Derrien, charged with treason for surrendering the Bizerte naval base and 16 French warships to the Germans, was sentenced today to life imprisonment.

The tribunal before which the admiral was tried had been asked for a death sentence.

TWO GRANDMOTHERS IN WAR SERVICE AS WACS

FORT SHERIDAN, Ill., May 12—Two WACS who are grandmothers are stationed at Fort Sheridan, it was learned today. They are Staff Sgt. Marie T. Sublett, of Springfield, Ill., a former social worker and Corp. Bessie Robinson, of New York City.

The Fort Sheridan public relations office, when asked for the ages of the WAC grandmothers, replied: "That, in the case of WACS, is always a military secret." The age limit for WAC enlistments is 49.

The four-day-old babe was in such a genial mood at the time it took a lusty wail from the nurse to get him to sound off his best squawk.

HITLER GIVES DEFENSE ORDERS

Fuehrer Plans Last-Minute Personal Inspection Of Atlantic Wall

LONDON, May 12—Hitler was reported today to be planning a last-minute personal inspection of the German defenses in Western Europe after Nazi commanders along the Atlantic wall were said to have received final instructions on the part they were to play in combating invasion.

The report of Hitler's planned visit to the so-called invasion coast was published in the London Daily Sketch which said that the reichsfuehrer may even be there today.

Underground channels were quoted by the Sketch as reporting that elaborate preparations had been made "in secret" during the last few days for the visit of the Nazi leader.

The German high command, according to the military writer of the Daily Herald, has completed anti-invasion plans. Commanding generals have been chosen, the writer said, and troops have been sent to their stations and given their last orders.

Only D-day is now awaited, it was said. Three armies were said to have been massed by the Germans as an anti-invasion force, including occupation troops from all over Western Europe and occupied countries.

Neutral military observers were said to calculate that Rommel now has massed seven complete panzer divisions, including the Adolf Hitler division which was mauled almost beyond recognition in Russia but now has been refitted and brought up to strength.

ISOLATED JAP UNITS ON MANUS BEING ERASED

ABOARD A U. S. FORTRESS OVER ITALY, May 12—The Allied Mediterranean Air Force put on a record display of power today in support of the new ground offensive on the Italian battlefield, smashing targets all the way from Cassino to the Brenner Pass.

By International News Service

The Allied Fifth and Eighth armies in Italy opened a general offensive today against the strongly defended German Gustav line barring the road to Rome after loosing the greatest artillery assault of the war against the Nazis.

Aimed big guns hurled thousands of shells into the enemy ranks in what may prove to be the biggest barrage in all history while overhead swarms of Mediterranean air force and tactical air force bombers battered the German positions.

Armored units immediately plunged into breaches in the enemy line against stiff German resistance.

Initial reports from the front said that the battle was going well in favor of the Allies.

The main force of the Allied armies was concentrated on the German defense in the Liri valley, through which the Via Cassina leads to Rome.

Levelled By Bombs

The entire front from the embattled Nazi stronghold of Cassino which was levelled in an all-out aerial bombardment by American heavyweight bombers westward to the Tyrrhenian sea was ablaze with action.

The Eighth Army was brought into the fray after moving secretly across the Apennine mountains for a smash against the Liri valley defenses.

British, Dominion, Indian and Polish troops were among the leading assault formations of the Eighth Army troops taking part in the action.

The Fifth Army commanded by Gen. Mark W. Clark struck northward against Cassino. If the Allies succeed in cracking the Gustav line the Germans will be forced to drop back to the Adolf Hitler line some 10 miles behind the present forward line.

At exactly 11 o'clock last night every Allied gun along the Gustav line fired simultaneously. At the same moment American, British, Canadian, Polish and French troops attacked along the entire length of the line.

The onslaught marked the climax of the Italian campaign.

All indications were that the (Continued on Page Two)

ing the course of the widespread attacks.

German radio stations reported Allied bomber formations over Franconia and Saxony, indicating spread of the new daylight offensive into home territory of the Reich.

Largest Armada

Some observers said the night-long attacks had involved the largest air armada ever sent out by the Royal Air Force. It was directed, as usual during the last month, against railways and other communications targets in France and Belgium.

Half an hour after dawn broke this morning, the first formations of daylight bombers roared out over the coast. For a full three hours, the drone of planes was heard in almost continuous symphony as the great procession streaked out on its destructive way.

Railway targets at Boulogne, France, and Leuven, Belgium, bore the brunt of the British assaults which also were directed against unidentified military targets in both occupied countries.

Other craft of the bomber command laid mines in enemy waters. The RAF lost 16 planes in the operations.

Both Lancasters and Halifaxes took part in the night blasts to keep up the offensive against key points in France and Belgium. Separate forces bombed the railway yards and the military objectives.

Crews which went on the mission to Boulogne reported that the attack opened shortly after 12:30 a. m. Smoke from the target area rolled up to a height of 1,000 feet.

Observers on the southeast English coast reported all types of planes had been shuttling back and forth to France since daybreak. The roar of airplane engines was continuous.

Earth tremors were felt on the English side of the channel at the beginning of daylight operations, then the explosions grew more distant as the Allied craft soared against objectives deeper inland.

The daylight operations caused a wholesale blackout of Nazi transmitters on the continent.

Radio Cologne and other transmitters in Germany, before they left the air, warned German residents that Allied bombers formations were over Western Germany while others were heading toward southwest Germany.

The whole Paris radio network went off the air at breakfast time.

An International News Service observer at Folkestone said Allied daylight raiders were engaged in one of the war's greatest cross-channel operations against Northern France. Between 9 a. m. and until past noon clouds of planes made nonstop shuttle flights, at times completely filling the skies overhead.

Extraordinarily large numbers of American fighters carried out sorties. Heavies and mediums flew out at altitudes so high that they could not be seen, but some RAF Mosquitoes were spotted.

For one hour the southeast coast was rocked continually by cross-channel explosions, including three blasts which were the heaviest ever felt on the English side of the channel. It was the noisiest morning since the war began, many observers agreed.

“Wave after wave of bombers, flying so high they could scarcely be seen roared out over the channel,” one observer said.

“Terrific crashes were again felt on this side. Inhabitants opened all windows to safeguard the panes against the heavy vibrations.”

Some coastal residents, according to the London Evening Star, estimated that last night's raids were carried out by the greatest night armada ever sent out by the RAF.

Allied forces were supremely ready and at their peak in numbers for resumption of the drive on Rome.

A special communique issued from headquarters of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson announced that the regrouping in advance of the offensive had been successfully completed without German interference.

Complicated and heavy road and rail movements of men and material had been smoothly carried out. This made heavy calls on all administrative services. All formations were involved in the operation.

“Despite bad weather and difficult terrain, the regrouping was accomplished on time,” the announcement said.

The drive, after weeks of preparation, broke a months-long stalemate along the front—stretching from just above Minturno, on the Tyrrhenian sea coast, northwestward through Cassino and on to the Adriatic.

The offensive got under way after the order was given by Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander of all Allied ground forces in Italy, at 11 o'clock last night.

The combined Allied armies, supported by the Mediterranean Air Force and the Allied Tactical Air Force, sent thousands of troops against the German strongholds.

ROBERT IMMEL TELLS ROTARIANS OF OLD CANALS

Thirty seconds of silent prayer was offered by Rotarians in honor of their Mothers, both living and dead, in keeping with Mother's Day at the regular noon day meeting, Thursday. Carl Leist sang “Wonderful Mother of Mine.”

Robert L. Immel of Yellowbud spoke interestingly on “Old Ohio Canals.” Mr. Immel lived the greater part of his life near the old canal which he says was responsible for both Pickaway and Ross counties becoming the most productive agricultural counties in the state. Pickaway county land, Mr. Immel stated rose from $20 to $40 an acre with the building of the canal. Too, it served its purpose well as a means of transporting farm produce to markets for a period of 25 years before the coming of the railroads.

The original canal, was built from Cleveland to Portsmouth and Cincinnati and came by way of Massillon and through Lockbourne and crossed the Scioto river at Circleville. The cost of constructing the canal from Cleveland to Portsmouth was $6,000,000.

TWO RUNS MADE BY CITY FIRE FIGHTERS

Two runs were made by the local fire department within the last 12 hours. About 9 o'clock Thursday evening smoke in the second floor of the Masonic Temple was thought to have been caused by a smoldering cigaret. Firemen could find no fire.

The second run was made about 7:30 o'clock Friday morning when a kerosene stove at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Diehl in South Bloomfield exploded. The fire was extinguished by neighbors before the truck arrived. No damage was caused except to the stove.

estimated 100 thousand reach military age each month, fifty to sixty thousand of whom are physically fit for service. The balance of calls for the next few months will be filled by other men under 26.

Local boards were instructed to review also the cases of men 26 through 29 who are in 1-A to determine whether they are qualified for reclassification in 2-A or 2-B.

“The number of men required to bring the armed forces to their required strength is now relatively small,” the memorandum said. “The number of men who will be required by the armed forces as replacements will, to a large extent, depend on the fortunes of war. The armed forces have indicated that their greatest immediate need is for physically fit men in the younger age groups, capable of the highest degree of efficiency under combat conditions.”

Army At Peak

With the Army now at peak strength and the Navy expected to attain such a status by September 1, draft calls are estimated at 100,000 to 150,000 men for the remainder of the year. On this basis, Hershey has estimated that the pool of men under 26 will fill calls until Fall.

“The attention now centered on the 18 through 25 year old group will be moved to the 26 through 29 year old registrants when they are needed by the armed forces and the supply of physically fit men in the 18 through 25 year old group is substantially depleted,” he said.

Registrants in both the 18 through 25, and 26 through 29 classes who have been classified 4-F or fit for only limited service may be placed in 2-A or 2-B categories if regularly engaged in war supporting or direct war activities. Hershey warned that all of the predictions are subject to adjustment as needs of the armed forces change. He admitted that the phrase “an indefinite period” had a better chance of meaning more than six months than the expression “for the time being.”

Major change in the new regulations, which supplant a memorandum issued last April 4, is in regard to men 30 or over. In the April 4, order, such registrants had to be “necessary” men in one of the War Manpower Commission's 35 essential activities to merit deferments. Now they have to be only “regularly engaged” in such activity.

As result of previous policies, a substantial number of men 30 through 37 were placed in 1-A who now qualify for deferment. Hershey instructed local boards to review such cases and grant 2-A or 2-B deferments to qualified men to eliminate “avoidable uncertainty” on the part of registrants and employers.

In keeping with this desire, the chief executive's appointments have been restricted to the mornings during the last week. The afternoons have been left free for rest and relaxation, although the President has returned to his office to work for a part of the afternoons.

Instead of snatching a quick snack at his desk, usually with some important caller present to discuss weighty problems of state and war, Mr. Roosevelt is now returning to the executive mansion for luncheon with some member of his family.

It is expected that the President will devote considerably more of his weekends to rest, swimming and sunshine through the Summer, and probably more of his time will be spent away from Washington.

while they throw it out in all directions," one girl commented bitterly. "I think the government is crooked. Some of the smart boys at the top ought to try living on $1,440 a year which comes to about $23 a week with deductions out."

Other girls attributed the lack of raises and promotions to the fear of the government that some girls might have to be kept on after the war if they are given better jobs now.

Misrepresentation in recruiting was cited by girls hired particularly by the Departments of State and War. They charged that several girls recruited for state department foreign service through a high-powered campaign and investigated for several weary months had been working in the capital as clerks for almost two years.

College girls said they had been brought to the capital to do "specialized" and "necessary" jobs only to find themselves typing or filing when they arrived.

The personnel turnover or about 50 percent per six months in some government agencies was attributed to this practice. A State department division which had about 51 employees a year ago has about 18 now.

"Inter-departmental politics upsets the applecart," a War department employee said. "Until he was drafted, the supervisor of my unit was a 23-year-old boy who passed all of the blame and none of the praise for our work on to us."

He dated girls after work and they got the quickest promotions and the most frequent raises.

A Department of Agriculture worker cited the case of a typist who spiraled from $1,440 a year to $2,000 within a short period through the good offices of her young boss who dated her exclusively.

"I always thought working for the government was something to be proud of," a WFPB girl said, "but if I can ever save enough money to get home and get out of this mess I'll never take a government job again."

New Program Designed To Fill Service Needs From Draftees Under 26

estimated 100 thousand reach military age each month, fifty to sixty thousand of whom are physically fit for service. The balance of calls for the next few months will be filled by other men under 26.

Local boards were instructed to review also the cases of men 26 through 29 who are in 1-A to determine whether they are qualified for reclassification in 2-A or 2-B.

"The number of men required to bring the armed forces to their required strength is now relatively small," the memorandum said. "The number of men who will be required by the armed forces as replacements will, to a large extent, depend on the fortunes of war. The armed forces have indicated that their greatest immediate need is for physically fit men in the younger age groups, capable of the highest degree of efficiency under combat conditions."

Army At Peak

With the Army now at peak strength and the Navy expected to attain such a status by September 1, draft calls are estimated at 100,000 to 150,000 men for the remainder of the year. On this basis, Hershey has estimated that the pool of men under 26 will fill calls until Fall.

"The attention now centered on the 18 through 25 year old group will be moved to the 26 through 29 year old registrants when they are needed by the armed forces and the supply of physically fit men in the 18 through 25 year old group is substantially depleted," he said.

Registrants in both the 18 through 25, and 26 through 29 classes who have been classified 4-F or fit for only limited service may be placed in 2-A or 2-B categories if regularly engaged in war supporting or direct war activities.

Hershey warned that all of the predictions are subject to adjustment as needs of the armed forces change. He admitted that the phrase "an indefinite period," had a better chance of meaning more than six months than the expression "for the time being."

Major change in the new regulations, which supplant a memorandum issued last April 4, is in regard to men 30 or over. In the April 4, order, such registrants had to be "necessary" men in one of the War Manpower Commission's 35 essential activities to merit deferments. Now they have to be only "regularly engaged" in such activity.

As result of previous policies, a substantial number of men 30 through 37 were placed in 1-A who now qualify for deferment. Hershey instructed local boards to review such cases and grant 2-A or 2-B deferments to qualified men to eliminate "avoidable uncertainty" on the part of registrants and employers.

nation in mid-Winter his reserves of resistance were lowered, and instead of snapping back quickly, bronchitis developed.

Admiral McIntire is authority for the statement that Mr. Roosevelt, as the result of his month's southern sojourn, has regained the lost ground and that the President is now in fine shape.

The President's close associates are anxious to keep the President from over-exerting himself again.

In keeping with this desire, the chief executive's appointments have been restricted to the mornings during the last week. The afternoons have been left free for rest and relaxation, although the President has returned to his office to work for a part of the afternoons.

Instead of snatching a quick snack at his desk, usually with some important caller present to discuss weighty problems of state and war, Mr. Roosevelt is now returning to the executive mansion for luncheon with some member of his family.

It is expected that the President will devote considerably more of his weekends to rest, swimming and sunshine through the Summer, and probably more of his time will be spent away from Washington.

Paul in Thessalonica

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 14 is Acts 17:1-10; 1 Thessalonians, the Golden Text being 1 Thess. 5:16-18, "Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks.")

IN OUR last lesson Paul had been beaten and imprisoned, at Philippi. An earthquake had broken his bonds, however, and the conversion of the jailer and his whole household, and the apology of the magistrates for unjustly accusing him, had somewhat made up for this treatment.

However, he and his companion, Silas, had been sent away from Philippi, albeit, peacefully. They passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, where there evidently were no Jewish synagogues, and came at last to Thessalonica, about 100 miles from Philippi. Remember that travel in those days, for people without means, like the apostles, meant walking.

Thessalonica was an important city of Macedonia in those days. Its former name was Thermo, derived from the hot springs found in that vicinity. It was founded by Cassandria about 315 B. C., and named after his wife, Thessalonica, sister of Alexander the Great. Its present name is Salonika.

There was a synagogue in Thessalonica, and there for three days Paul expounded the gospel of Christ, and many were converted, among them a good many "devout Greeks," a number of them being "the chief women," wives of prominent Greek citizens.

Unconverted Jews Envious
The Jews who would not accept the faith, however, were jealous of the popularity of Paul and Silas, and they gathered together the loafers of the city, who "set all the city in an uproar, and assaulted the house of one, Jason," with whom these people believed Paul and Silas were staying.

Not finding Paul and Silas, they dragged Jason to the rulers of the city, the "Politarch," which means rulers. They charged Jason with entertaining in his home men who set the world upside down, saying that "these do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying there is another king, one Jesus."

These accusations troubled the rulers, but when they "had taken the security of Jason and of the others, they let them go." This must mean that they were allowed to go by furnishing bail, and that they would be tried later. The preaching of the new religion probably had aroused the interest of the population, but the charge of breaking the laws was absolutely unjust, as the Christians were very law-abiding persons. We hear no more of Jason, who, probably was a man of means and a leading citizen.

The brethren immediately sent Paul and Silas away by night, and they went to Berea, where they "went into the synagogue of the Jews."

Paul's visit to Thessalonica was about 50 A. D., and his letter to the Thessalonians about 51 A. D., not so long after his visit. The founding of this church was a most important missionary step, and Paul seems to have always had a warm affection for the people in this church. He longed to see them again, and says so in this letter.

Tells of His Work
He tells them where he has been and what he has been doing since he left them, how he "thought it good to be left at Athens alone," so he sent Timothy, whom he has sometimes called his son, to go to Thessalonica, to "establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith." Timothy had brought back a good report of the Thessalonians to Paul, comforting him. He tells them of his hopes for them, advising them that they "increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men." They should live pure lives, "for God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."

He counsels them "that ye study to be quiet, and to do your work with your own hands . . . that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing." He assures them of comfort in bereavement, for "if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." "See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men." "Rejoice evermore." "Pray without ceasing." "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night...about all the grain used to distill war-alcohol not really being used up. She didn't realize it, either." "It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling...the part recovered is a highly-prized concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain...products rich in vitamins B<sub>1</sub> and B<sub>2</sub>...so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."

Paul in Thessalonica

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 14 is Acts 17:1-10; 1 Thessalonians, the Golden Text being 1 Thess. 5:16-18, "Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks.")

IN OUR last lesson Paul had been beaten and imprisoned, at Philippi. An earthquake had broken his bonds, however, and the conversion of the jailer and his whole household, and the apology of the magistrates for unjustly accusing him, had somewhat made up for this treatment.

However, he and his companion, Silas, had been sent away from Philippi, albeit, peacefully. They passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, where there evidently were no Jewish synagogues, and came at last to Thessalonica, about 100 miles from Philippi. Remember that travel in those days, for people without means, like the apostles, meant walking.

Thessalonica was an important city of Macedonia in those days. Its former name was Thermo, derived from the hot springs found in that vicinity. It was founded by Cassandria about 315 B. C., and named after his wife, Thessalonica, sister of Alexander the Great. Its present name is Salonika.

There was a synagogue in Thessalonica, and there for three days Paul expounded the gospel of Christ, and many were converted, among them a good many "devout Greeks," a number of them being "the chief women" wives of prominent Greek citizens.

Unconverted Jews Envious

The Jews who would not accept the faith, however, were jealous of the popularity of Paul and Silas, and they gathered together the loafers of the city, who "set all the city in an uproar, and assaulted the house of one, Jason," with whom these people believed Paul and Silas were staying.

Not finding Paul and Silas, they dragged Jason to the rulers of the city, the "Politarch," which means rulers. They charged Jason with entertaining in his home men who set the world upside down, saying that "these do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying there is another king, one Jesus."

These accusations troubled the rulers, but when they "had taken the security of Jason and of the others, they let them go." This must mean that they were allowed to go by furnishing bail, and that they would be tried later. The preaching of the new religion probably had aroused the interest of the population, but the charge of breaking the laws was absolutely unjust, as the Christians were very law-abiding persons. We hear no more of Jason, who, probably was a man of means and a leading citizen.

The brethren immediately sent Paul and Silas away by night, and they went to Berea, where they "went into the synagogue of the Jews."

Paul's visit to Thessalonica was about 50 A. D., and his letter to the Thessalonians about 51 A. D., not so long after his visit. The founding of this church was a most important missionary step, and Paul seems to have always had a warm affection for the people in this church. He longed to see them again, and says so in this letter.

Tells of His Work

He tells them where he has been and what he has been doing since he left them, how he "thought it good to be left at Athens alone," so he sent Timothy, whom he has sometimes called his son, to go to Thessalonica, to "establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith." Timothy had brought back a good report of the Thessalonians to Paul, comforting him. He tells them of his hopes for them, advising them that they "increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men." They should live pure lives, "for God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."

He counsels them "that ye study to be quiet, and to do your work with your own hands . . . that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing."

He assures them of comfort in bereavement, for "if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

"See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men. Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad you dropped in, Judge. I was just trying to explain to Mary what you told us down at lodge last night... about all the grain used to distill war-alcohol not really being used up. She didn't realize it, either."

"It's true, Mary. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is being recovered and returned to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed. Only the starch is removed during distilling... the part recovered is a highly-prized concentrate containing valuable proteins, fats and carbohydrates. The distilling industry really has taken a leading part in the development of new cattle and poultry feed products from reprocessed grain... products rich in vitamins B<sub>1</sub> and B<sub>2</sub>... so essential to satisfactory growth and production. And the recovery of grain will apply also to the making of whiskey when production is resumed."

BELGIUM FIGHTS ON
OF these the bravest are the Belgians. Thus Caesar, 2,000 years ago, describing his Gallic opponents, summed up the inhabitants of Flanders. In the last war the soldiers of King Albert worthily carried on the tradition.
Now Belgium is conquered, but still fights. "News from Belgium," a publication which tells of the struggle, reports the following acts of sabotage from the one province of Hainaut in a single month. Over 30 pylons supporting electric high tension cables were blown up. Several electric sub-stations and a railway signal box were destroyed. Railroad tracks were damaged at 29 points. About 600 pounds of dynamite were stolen at the Mons railroad depot. A number of lock gates were damaged by explosives. In most of the mines of Hainaut, production during the month was cut in half.

Remember that detection for any of these acts means death, and that tale-bearing is liberally rewarded. The Belgians, though disarmed, are still fighting for freedom, and the time is not far off when they will attain it.

HE WROTE FOR BOYS
MANY a man and many a boy will grieve at the death of Ralph Henry Barbour. For more than 40 years his stories of school and college athletics have delighted boys of every age from 10 to 90. "The Crimson Sweater," "Weatherby's Inning," and "For the Honor of the School," to name only three of his more than 150 books, are still fresh in the minds of those who read them a long time ago.

Sport plays a great part in American life, more than in that of any other people, unless it be the English. Barbour appealed to this wholesome taste, and provided reading which no one would object to seeing in his sons' hands. He has had many imitators, but few have been so expert.

A SERGEANT POET
"I don't like any sergeants," wrote in the last war Bill, the hero of "Dere Mable." Sergeants are traditionally hard-boiled, always seeking out some hapless soul to put on KP.
Like other traditions, there are exceptions. One sergeant, Karl Shapiro, now in the South Pacific, is a poet, and has received an award from the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation to enable him to publish his poetry.
Even Private Hargrove never imagined a sergeant poet.

"Senate Assists Small Business," says a Washington headline. Good idea! As Goldsmith almost said: "I'll fare the land, to hastening ill a prey, where trusts accumulate and men decay."

Times Just Ahead Seen
Most Perilous for U. S.
By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist
WASHINGTON—It seems incredible to me that ANY man should actually WANT to be president of the United States during the next four years. The long, fearsome days that lie ahead until the war is ended may be the most perilous in the history of the republic.
Only a president of superhuman wisdom could survive the pitfalls and mistakes such dangerous responsibility is sure to bring. Whoever is in the White House at the end of 1948 will be a discredited man. It will be impossible for any man being to guide the nation through the remainder of the war—unless the war ends in a world satisfying victory—and not come through the ordeal a victim, not a hero.
Even though post-war plans eventually may fall into the perfect pattern of a made-to-order jig-saw puzzle, there will be the ordeal of first finding the missing pieces to make the perfection whole. Being president from 1945 to 1949 is a job at which no one can succeed.
If I were Governor Dewey I'd not have the nomination on a radar platter. And if I were Mr. Roosevelt I'd move out of 1600 Pennsylvania avenue as fast as I could get the moving vans backed up with reasonable dignity. Then I'd be certain of having a glorious place in history. Staying on for a fourth term is an honor weakened by the certainty of ultimate failure.
Yet, I am convinced that Franklin Roosevelt does, indeed, mean to run again. If I had had any doubts—which I have not had—I should have changed my opinion to a certainty on listening to Mrs. Roosevelt tell of the number and variety of speeches she will make within the next week or so.
Mrs. Roosevelt will address many kinds of audiences. She is undoubtedly campaigning for her husband.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

DISCORD REACHES CLIMAX
WASHINGTON—It looks as though the honeymoon between Secretary of State Hull and his energetic young under-secretary, Ed Stettinius, were over—well over.

There have been reports for some time that things weren't going so well between them, but all doubt as to the accuracy of these reports vanished when Stettinius came back from London. Close friends say that the two men are now in about the same pistol-drawn position as Hull was with ex-Undersecretary Sumner Welles.

The climax came when Stettinius arrived at the airport on his return from London. Michael McDermott, efficient State department press relations chief and one of the four officials closest to Hull, met him. As Stettinius stepped off the plane and posed for the cameramen, McDermott handed him a small piece of paper.

Stettinius held the paper inside his hat so no one could see it and read it. The paper said: "Don't say anything until you see the secretary of state."

The undersecretary obeyed orders. But when so important an official returns from so important a mission, it is always customary to hold a press conference and, in deference to repeated demands, Stettinius finally did so.

Furthermore, he talked with refreshing frankness about his trip, about ways and means of discussing peace with Germany, and about other questions of vital concern to the American people. It was agreed in advance that everything should be off-the-record for the time being, but that Stettinius, after checking with Hull, would release the essential part of his interview for publication.

However, when Hull saw the transcript of Stettinius' remarks, he turned thumbs down completely. He decided that his frank and forthright undersecretary had best keep his light under a bushel. No word of what Stettinius said has been released, so far for publication.

As one of Hull's closest advisers remarked afterwards:
"The damn fool hasn't learned to talk without saying anything."

NOTE—Chief trouble between Hull and Stettinius seems to be that the President calls Stettinius over to the White House much more than he does Hull.

BLACKLISTED SWEDE

Axel Wenner-Gren, the big Swedish munitions maker who has been virtually exiled in Mexico, is moving heaven and earth to get himself off the State department blacklist. He has even gone so far as to get Ed Flynn, Democratic boss of the Bronx and former chairman of the Democratic national committee, to go to bat on his behalf.

Flynn has been making representations to Secretary of State Hull that Wenner-Gren has had absolutely no connections with Germany and should not be blacklisted. The State department, so far, has refused to move.

Wenner-Gren came into prominence shortly after war broke when he fled from Sweden on his yacht, the Southern Cross, and picked up survivors from the torpedoed British vessel, Athenia.

After that, he lived for some time in Nassau, near his close friend, the Duke of Windsor, and later moved to Mexico, (Continued on Page Eight)

Capitol steps. Mr. Sam, "mentioned" more than a hundred times for the vice presidential ticket, was looking mighty pert.
"And, now what have you been doing?" I inquired.
"Just taking a little sunning from a bench in the Capitol park," he answered. "Trying to make myself feel young again. No! No! You're wrong. Miss! I'm not planning one single thing except how to get myself elected again from the Fourth congressional district in Texas."

• WHOEVER THE MIDAS AMONG PROPHETS was who promised a heaven of golden streets to those who avoided sin was a fellow of small imagination. He should have promised a heaven of "Washington in May" as a reward for good behavior.
For who wouldn't rather walk softly on thick, green turf (there is some of it in the parks and much of it in the many private estates and gardens which lurk about the capital) than clutter about on solid metal sidewalks, whatever their color? Especially now since rubber heels aren't what they used to be.
In addition to the refreshing grass of Washington there are the hundreds of thousands of trees leading out in canopies and vistas on virtually every city street. And the dogwood and the azaleas are blossoming in a frenzy of color.

• SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE CLAUDE WICKARD is very enthusiastic about the look of Washington in May. This attitude is quite fitting for the head of the department of agriculture.
I saw Wickard taking color pictures at which task he is an expert the other afternoon in the garden at "Tregaron," the lovely estate on Macomb street of former Ambassador to Russia and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. Tregaron's garden wanders along paths in and out of little wooded groves and beside pools. It is so beautiful you are certain it isn't real.
Mention of Mrs. Davies reminds me that Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones has written an introduction to the story of Mrs. Davies' father, for whom a town in Texas was named "Post, Texas."
Post developed several counties in the Panhandle state. The record of his achievements there is told in the book just about to be published.
There's much talk, by the way, of Davies' re-entry into diplomacy by an exciting and still unnamed route.

Many Causes of Backache

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE BACK is the crossroads of our organism where the body and the mind and the soul meet. They often get into argument and in having it out all hell breaks loose.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Or, to put it another way, a backache consists of one, the causes of the backache, and two, the person who has the backache. The cure and outcome of the case depends more on the second element than the first. The back is the burden bearer. When the burdens of the soul set too heavy the back protests. A spineless person often has a backache.

The question—"What is good for a sore back?"—indicates a profound naivete on the part of the layman. It would take any doctor an hour to complete an examination which would allow even of a guess as to the cause of backache. Very few physicians make such an examination. Partly they lack the information, but mostly they lack the patience. There is hardly any field of medicine where the patients are more neglected. Every town should have a "misery" clinic.

Causes Numerous
Backache is in medicine the elephant examined by the blind man. Each blind man felt a separate part. Each one's conclusions as to what the elephant was really like were limited. Your backache is due to: (1) posture—says the orthopedist; (2) the uterus—says the gynecologist; (3) the kidneys—says the urologist; (4) rupture of an intervertebral disk—says the surgeon; (5) focal infection—says the internist; (6) gold-bricking—says the top sergeant; (7) high heels—no! I mean low heels—says the cobbler; (8) wearing shoes—says the Nature faddist; (9) going barefooted—says Miss Nancy; (10) "Something you tried to lift, no doubt"—says the husband; (11) "Sitting around on them hard chairs in a draft at Grogan's, no doubt"—says the wife; (12) railway spine—says the shyster lawyer. Well, there's a round dozen of blind men.

Protruded Disk
A newly discovered form of injury to the back is the protruded or ruptured intervertebral disk. Between the bony bodies of the spinal vertebrae are cartilaginous disks which act as cushions and give the joints mobility. They are quite dense on the surface, but in the center there is a soft area called the nucleus pulposus. When subjected to severe strain this may rupture, be squeezed so that it protrudes from between the bodies of two vertebrae and presses on nerves causing backache and sciatica. It can be removed surgically, and, if properly done, this relieves the pain. When a patient with a protruded disk is operated on by an expert the result is magic; if by a bungler the result is tragic.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

"It's strange"—Blair's voice was muted—"strange to think of never seeing you again. It takes all the fun out of things."

He saw her looking at him curiously—the cup lay crushed in his hands.

"You're just too strong." Smiling, she stooped to help him pick the fragments from the floor. Her dark head brushed his cheek, and the faint fragrance of her hair rose up to him. Memories long buried rose with it. . . . His hands opened, and the pieces of china fell to the floor.

"Blair!" It was a cry, compact of yearning and lifelong hunger, surging from depths so powerfully unleashed that the little cabin vibrated to the sound. And as she raised her face, he caught her to him, lifted her, and held her motionless.

"Please! Colin!" Again the pressure of hands seeking futilely to hold him off. "Let me go."

"Do you want to go?" the deep-toned voice was asking. "Blair, tell me you don't ever want to go."

Head thrown back, she looked up at him. He felt her eyes searching his, and in that second knew that she and she alone had ever mattered. He knew too why he and Tennant must always be at war: both wanted her.

"I love you," Colin whispered. "I've never loved anyone else. I never will."

Blair's arms moved upward over his shoulders, and now her head fell back. She gave him her lips. . . .

At last Blair moved a step back, and looked toward the fire. "Better take that kettle off," she faltered, "before it all boils over." As if the last remnant of strength had gone from her, she sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands. Instantly he was kneeling beside her. There were tears in her eyes, and her lips were tremulous when at last she rose with "I'd better go."

But at the cabin door Blair held out her arms, saying, "Kiss me once more," and she stood on tiptoe to reach his lips.

"At noon I'll be back," she whispered, and held up a warning finger. "But if you, Colin, ever—"

"I know—If I ever call you little sister again, you'll murder me."

Just before noon that day, in a corner of the big room at the inn, Irina Meredith and Jonathan Dove were talking. The little man showed visible signs of strain.

Dove was saying: "Rae couldn't have been on the Upper Nelson; his traps hadn't been visited for days." He seemed to deliberate; then abruptly he asked, "What does Colonel Dowling want with him?"

"The radiogram didn't say."

"Did you see the message yourself?"

"Rodney let me read it. It said that a Colonel Dowling was flying up to see Colin tomorrow and that it was urgent."

Dove's fingers moved. "I can imagine it might be. This Dowling is head of the military intelligence."

He leaned forward until his eyes were very close to hers. "Irina, I don't want Rae and Dowling to meet."

Impassive, she watched him until once more he spoke. "I am leaving now to look for Rae again—this time along his lower trap line. I will not be back until tomorrow. You wait for him here. If he doesn't come to Learnmonth by tomorrow morning, go to his cabin." Dove's eyes fluttered. "You know the way."

Irina ignored the thrust. "What do you want me to do when I find him?"

From his pocket, Dove pulled a small black cardboard box. "What if Colin Rae is not well enough to see Colonel Dowling tomorrow?"

The girl's eyes burned, more brightly. "Poison?"

"Nothing so obvious. An opiate; but for a time he will lose all intelligence, and at the hospital Benedict will say he cannot see anyone for two days. That is all I need."

Dove raised his head, and a note of savage exultation rang in his voice. "Twelve years I have worked and waited. Long I have listened to these blustering Canadians and loud-mouthed Americans denouncing my Party and my Fatherland; and I have smiled and made ready for an hour I knew would come. That hour is almost here."

He reached forward. "This is your chance to be of supreme help to the Party. Succeed, and you can ask much. But failure is not permitted."

Dove dropped the black box in her lap, and she turned it in her fingers. "You swear this is not poison?"

"Irina!" The kindly eyes were reproachful. "Between us there should be trust." After a pause, the Nazi asked, "When are you going to marry Selkirk?"

Rebellion gathered in Irina's eyes. "We have been through all that before."

"Well, you can't stay here much longer, putting him off day after day with no good reason. You will be still more valuable as his wife. You are so obstinate, Irina. Are you in love with someone else—with Colin Rae?"

"No."

"Then why not marry Selkirk? He may not be young, but neither is he repulsive. Between us there should be trust." After a pause, the Nazi asked, "When are you going to marry Selkirk?"

Rebellion gathered in Irina's eyes. "We have been through all that before."

rected her flight over frozen lakes and swamp. For two hours they bore northward, and at last he folded his map. "We're close enough to that inlet now. Better land."

She circled, examining the surface of the ice; then, cutting the motor, glided in behind a low projecting headland.

There Colin harnessed his dogs and swung a pair of field glasses over his shoulder; then he looked at his watch. "In three hours at the most I should be back. If I'm not, don't wait. No matter how much you want to, don't wait. Go back and get Colonel Dowling." He kissed her and, calling to his dogs, was gone.

For Blair those hours were endless. The winter sun sank lower, while the plane's long shadow crept farther and farther out across the ice. . . . but at the end of two hours she gave a gasp of relief—Colin's tall, familiar form was riding the toboggan toward her. But she had never seen his face so sternly set, and when he spoke his voice was tight and strange.

"Let's get out of here!" With racing fingers, he stripped the harness from the dogs. "Take off straight south and keep low. I'll tell you all about it when we're in the air."

And not until they had put miles behind them did Colin let Blair gain altitude. "We were closer to them than I thought." His straining eyes cast a last look behind. "If they'd ever heard us—"

"Bombers!" His voice was still tense and strange. "Two four-motor bombers, and men working on them. They were testing the motors—that means there's not much time to spare."

Colin saw her unbelieving eyes. "I know. It's like a nightmare. German bombers. I named within five hundred miles of Winnipeg. In six hours they could be over New York!"

He looked out at the setting sun. "We can't make Winnipeg tonight, but I've got to get word to Colonel Dowling to come direct to 'Trappers Lake.' He's drummed with his fingers on the window, then asked, 'Can you drop me at Moose Lake?'

Blair shook her head. "It's too tight a squeeze with this wind."

"Then land me at the cabin. I'll mush over to Moose Lake and radio Winnipeg from the company post. Colonel Dowling's got to know about this air base before the night is out."

Her eyes flinched. "Colin, don't go to your cabin until the Colonel gets here. You're most dangerous to Dove now—and I think Dove knows it."

"I raised her mittened hand to his lips. 'I promise. I'll keep out of sight until the Colonel gets here. Tonight I'll sleep at Moose Lake, and some time tomorrow I'll be back at the cabin with Selkirk, waiting for Dowling.'"

"But Dove may look for you at your cabin."

"I hope he does. I'm going to produce Jonathan Dove if I have to bring him in on a toboggan."

tive work must be done in inaugurating these projects or programs of scope and promise. While haste is important it is well to refrain from over strenuous or enthusiastic action. In private contacts avoid turbulence or impetuous moves and all should be gratifying.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very active and lively year, with change, travel, new ventures, or fresh plans. It may take swift grasp of possibilities when appealing factors for progress and advancement are at hand, but these should be pursued with constructive skill or well-executed plans and programs, and not under forced issues or over excitement or optimism. The same measure of restraint and good judgment should be applied to social, domestic or emotional openings for happiness if ultimate satisfaction is expected.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE NECESSITY EXPLAINED

(Editor's Note—Circleville's Kiwanis club is seeking to increase church and Sunday school attendance in the county, believing that such an accomplishment would go a long way toward solving the juvenile delinquency problem. The club has asked ministers of the county to present arguments for church attendance and the fourth of this series appears below.)

BY THE REV. CARL L. KENNEDY

On one of his visits to England that noble Christian, King Khama of Bechuanaland put his finger on a serious weakness of our generation when he said: "You English take care of your goods, but you throw away your children." Are not we in America, and specifically in Circleville, equally guilty of carelessness in our attitude toward this major social task? And there can be no doubt that it is major. The greatest task of this generation is to bring up the next generation, with desperately needed improvements.

This series of articles is concerned primarily with the increasing of the general attendance in our Sunday morning Church schools. It is a fine thing, this cooperation between members of a service club and a ministers' association, but the subject cannot revolve merely around increasing attendance at our Sunday schools. It is a far bigger problem than that, and the whole affects its component parts just as the parts affect the whole. The supreme question is the supreme importance of Christian Education.

Sunday school, at best, gives the child or adult (I make no distinction for I have never found an adult who had learned "everything") only a smattering of knowledge with a hit, skip and jump Bible and character training. Certainly, it is important that the Sunday school be backed and attended, but Christian Education demands attention to its other component parts to complete the whole. Let me illustrate: a person eats breakfast, dinner and supper on Sunday, but he also needs three meals a day throughout the week. He wouldn't think of eating enough on Sunday to last him through the week; he couldn't. However, he does need food on the Sabbath, to sustain his physical body. What person of common sense would say that one hour or two, at the most, of Christian Education on Sunday morning, is all his soul requires when his physical body needs physical sustenance as often as three times a day? Essentially, physical food and spiritual food are the same, the only difference being that, actually, the latter is the more important; at least you take your soul with you when you leave this world of physical things.

Let me be constructive: first of all, the Church must gird herself. Christian teaching in our Church today must be many-sided indeed. It must use effective, deeply-thought lesson materials in the Church school. It must provide strong Summer conferences for youth. It must seriously encourage Christian home life. There must be in it sound programs for young people, systematic study courses for adults—on missions, social issues, doctrine, and a dozen other fields. Leaders must constantly be trained, in parish, college, and seminary. Above all, Christian teaching must be permeated with consecrated, committed Christian belief. It must truly be "sustained evangelism."

In the second place, let the Community gird itself. Let there be less bigoted, non-cooperative congregations and fewer "we only are right" churches, and let there be a good deal more friendliness and honest cooperation, and that means a lot of us will have to be deaf, dumb and blind to some of our denominational "differences." Then, let the laymen and ministers of the community provide a genuine Leadership Training School for Sunday school teachers, most of whom have the love of God deeply imbedded in their hearts, but whose teaching standards cannot yet hope even to compete with public school standards, certainly a primary essential for teaching character building. Besides Leadership Training as a community venture, there needs to be introduced into our public school system, if it takes years to do it, Christian Education itself. This may be carried on by the community with paid teachers acceptable to representative churches, or by the plan of released time, wherein the schools release those children who so desire, to attend weekday school of religion in one or more stated churches, with volunteer, but trained teachers.

Then, too, let the community, including ALL the churches, sponsor a Circleville Daily Vacation Bible School, but the cooperation of EVERY church in such a venture is a basic requirement for assured success. Otherwise, let individual churches sponsor separate schools, though this is not the ideal.

But the most important component of Christian Education is "The Family." This has been said again and again, and had better be repeated until parents awaken from their lengthy "Rip Van Winkle" slumber: if the cornerstone of the nation is not interested in Christian Education, woe to the hopes of the Divine Architect Himself, but frustration to Christian builders as well. I myself will raise the banner of hope for the cause of Christian Education when parents awaken to the fact that they can, if they will overcome pretended or genuine timidity, and have family devotions, Grace at three meals a day (take turns as we do in our family), read and study the Bible with the entire family, organize a Family Council to discuss the Bible, family problems, the family pocketbook, the future, etc. For if the family awakens, every member of it will recognize the supreme importance of Christian Education, and not only will the Sunday school prosper, but church attendance will leap up, churches will cooperate more fully, and the community at large will go forward to the building of a better democracy simply because the cornerstone itself is sturdy.

"Rise up, O men of God! The Church for you doth wait, Her strength unequal to her task; "Rise up, and make her great!"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS Pork chops and steaks are cooked best by braising or frying on top of the stove. Heat a heavy frying pan very hot, add about one tablespoon of lard or drippings, or if the chops have a good covering of fat, you will not need extra fat. In that case place chops in the pan with the fat edge down. This browns the fat and at the same time provides enough fat to grease the frying pan. Brown chops nicely on both sides, then reduce heat but do not add water, cover closely, and cook slowly until thoroughly done, turning occasionally so that the cooking will be uniform. The time required for pork chops is 45 to 60 minutes.

The well-being of every human being depends upon proteins. They build and repair body tissues. Animal proteins are usually complete and of high nutritional quality. Most plant proteins are incomplete, but they vary widely in nutritional value. Among the best of the plant proteins are those of soybeans, peanuts and cottonseed.

Because she is so dear to you—give her the one gift which above all others, expresses love and appreciation. Give her jewelry she may treasure forever.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If you use chamois skins to clean windows, your windshield, glassware, etc., you have found that after being wet they dry like boards. Dry them in the wind or in front of an electric fan. The breeze will make them soft and pliable. Rubbing together, too, while drying will help soften them.

When you make new washable draperies, allow for shrinkage by sewing a tuck in the wrong side of the material close to the top hem of the curtain.

O. S. U. COACHING STAFF ADDS TWO NEW MEMBERS

COLUMBUS, May 12 — Ohio State university's football coaching staff, which threatened to open the 1943 season with the smallest Big Ten staff since 1913, added two members today to give it more the appearance of Paul E. Brown's pre-war board of strategy.

Named as assistants to Acting Head Coach Carroll Widdoes were Jack Graf, 1941 Buckeye star, and Homer Eddington, a former Hamilton high school mentor.

Graf's appointment was a logical choice and Eddington's was a wise one, Buckeye fans in the state capital agreed. On the strength of his sterling record as a member of Brown's first Ohio State eleven Graf earned the assistantship. But his record with last winter's freshman basketball team was a supporting factor in his choice, too.

Eddington, although only 27, packs a lot of football knowledge and experience. He graduated from Ironton high school, where he starred in football. Coming to Ohio State as a freshman, he played on one of Coach Francis Schmidt's better yearling squads, but was unable to play with the varsity squad because of an old knee injury dating back to his high school days.

Both Graf and Eddington hold medical discharges from the Army.

BROWNS DROP LEADERSHIP AND YANKEES CLIMB

St. Louis Boys Make Four Errors—Cards Lose 2 To 1 To Dodgers

NEW YORK, May 12—The St. Louis Browns, American League leaders since the season began, lost top place today by virtue of losing, or rather handing a game, to the Washington Senators in a night contest, 4 to 2.

The New York Yankees, although now leading in percentage in topmost position in the league, actually are still half a game behind the Browns.

The St. Louis boys sang the blues of the same name after four errors were chalked up against them. Catcher Joe Schultz accounted for two of them and mishandling of the ball in the infield by Don Gutteridge presented two runs to the Senators in the eighth.

Thus, through no fault of his own, Pitcher Jack Kramer's winning streak was broken at five games, although he yielded only five hits.

Hank Borowy recorded his fourth consecutive victory to give the Yanks the game against the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2. A succession of bunts and hits gave New York four tallies in the third.

The Chicago White Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics fought it out for 16 innings at Philadelphia, then Hal Trosky, Chicago first sacker achieved what virtually all ball players' hope to achieve some time or other—he stole home. He was on third and Ralph Hodgins was on first when Hodgins started for second, Russ Christopher, the A's hurler, looked around at Hodgins and Trosky beat his throw to the plate. Hodgins came in on Mike Tresh's double.

The Cleveland Indians truly were on the warpath when they "stalked" two Boston Red Sox baserunners in the third and tagged them out in a demonstration of fast and alert ball. The double killing was helpful, too, because the Sox had scored two runs just previously and the closeness of the final score gave evidence of the value of the double out. The Indians won 7 to 6.

A four-run rally in the seventh was good enough to ward off Boston's three-run comeback in the seventh and eighth.

In the National League the Giants continued to exemplify misery by losing to the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3. They thus have dropped nine of the last ten games. Despite a two-run homer credited to Phil Weintraub in the seventh, which put the Giants out in front after six scoreless innings, the Giants could not hold on.

The Boston Braves pounded two Pittsburgh pitchers for 13 hits and the Pirates lost 7 to 2. The Braves scored in all except three innings.

Curt Davis was in top form for the Dodgers yesterday, even though he was notched for eight hits, but he led Brooklyn to a 2 to 1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The only tally he allowed because of Dixie Walker's error in the seventh.

The Chicago Cubs ended a 13-game losing streak by defeating the Phillies behind the seven-hit pitching of Ed Hanyzewski. The score was 5 to 3.

Platter Boosters May Make Him Favorite For Historic Preakness

BALTIMORE, Md., May 12 — Gramps Image beats Pensive in the Chesapeake stakes; Pensive beats Gramps Image and Stir Up among others in the Kentucky Derby; Stir Up meantime has whipped most of the other good three-year-olds; Platter has run only once since last year and finished second in a sprint.

Yet to add to the foregoing confusion Platter is being talked about as the probable favorite for tomorrow's running of the historic Preakness, with $50,000 added money going into the big pool to be copped by the first ones to get down there in front.

They are running for that big purse, plus a cup, plus the blanket of black-eyed susans. They will be running, from start to payoff wire, approximately seven of the outstanding colts currently in the business of running. And perhaps when they have gone steaming over that mile and three-sixteenths Platter, from the stable of George D. Widener, will be out there in front in keeping with hopes and expectations of those who have tabbed him as the horse to beat.

However, that successor to Whirlaway as the Calumet filer, Pensive, may have something to say about this one as he tries to add another jewel in the so-called triple crown, which he can pick up and wear by winning the Preakness and the Belmont as follow ups to his win in the Derby.

Pensive may have a great deal to say about it and so may Stir Up. The latter ran himself out in a head and head duel with Broadcloth, a non-eligible for the Preakness, when they tangled up in the Derby and when Stir Up and Broadcloth went a little wide it opened the door for Pensive to come sliding through by a margin of 4 1/2 lengths.

In the midst of all that, Stir Up ran a commendable race. In that mile and a quarter grind he was never worse than fourth, nor worse than 5 1/2 lengths back, his deficit at the finish. Had it been a mile and three-sixteenths he conceivably would have won it, for the distance of the race has all to do with the running of a horse under such a rider as Eddie Arcaro.

In any case, before Platter is built up too strongly for tomorrow, it would be well to remember that Pensive and Stir Up proved themselves as three-year-olds in the Kentucky Derby, while Platter has done nothing as a three-year-old except to get himself out-sprinted in a warmup for the Preakness.

More certain that the outcome of the race is the lineup of jockeys on the favorites. Conn McCreary, the 99-pound gamester will again ride Pensive; Arcaro will, as usual, be up on Stir Up, while Johnny Longden, will be aboard Platter.

From here it looks like a race among those three. If one of them doesn't do it, then look out for Gramps Image or something that will create a veritable miracle by hitting that wire first. Not that miracles are unusual in racing.

BREWERS HOLD BREATH-TAKING WINNING PACE

By International News Service

The league-leading Milwaukee Brewers today maintained their breath-taking pace by running up the eighth straight win in the current string in defeating Indianapolis 6 to 0.

Homer Martin put the game on ice for the Milwaukee aggregation when he homered with two men on base to break up the hitherto scoreless mound battle between Charley Sproull and Woody Rich. He again brought two in in the eighth with a three-bagger and scored the final run on an outfield putout. Johnny Hutchings will pitch for the losers today while the home-team selection was the Cuban, Julio Acosta.

At Minneapolis, the Millers smarted today under the 9 to 0 defeat handed them by the Toledo Mud Hens behind the three-hit hurling of Bill Seisnoth. The southpaw struck out five and allowed no walks. Seisnoth also was team leader on the offensive having turned in three hits, including a homer. The game was a comedy of errors for the Kels, was their first loss in six straight wins.

Kansas City found itself on the losing end of an 8 to 3 score handed it by the Louisville Colonels. In the opening game of the present series, Allie Byers and Stan Partenheimer were the hurlers, with the former pitching hitless ball from the 7th frame on.

Columbus at St. Paul was postponed because of wet grounds.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DEFENSE HAS TO GUESS

IT WOULD BE interesting to see a compilation, based carefully on some big tournament, which would indicate how many defeat-able contracts get made just because the defenders do not have X-ray eyes. Some great percentage of made contracts would be beaten if the opponents only knew the exact situation. No matter how able they may be, there is nearly always some element of guess in their efforts.

diamond A. Trumps, of course, finished the hand.

What an easy thing it would have been to beat that contract if West had seen fit to lead a diamond at the start, or if East had played the 2 on the club lead instead of the 7 and thereby caused a switch to a diamond. It would have changed the entire timing of the hand. If South then tried to set up a heart for a diamond discard, he would have got started too late in the process. East should have won the first heart and returned his second diamond. Then, when West won the second heart, he could have cashed the diamond trick which would set the contract.

The entire fate of this hand depends on how soon diamonds get led against South.

If East had made a heart bid, and the suit was led, how should South play his spade suit in trying for 3-No Trumps on this deal?

legendary Italian figure associating Jimmy with tag all the local orchestra leaders "Umbrigo" when he hit town on a vaudeville tour.

Cass Daley, the zany dame of films and radio who has established the record of 30 airplane guest star appearances in as many weeks, is well on the way to establishing a fan mail record as well. She now averages more than 1,000 letters a week from listeners.

Paul Douglas, regular on "Abie's Irish Rose", and his wife, Virginia Field, currently in Broadway's "Doughgirls", expect an heir in the fall.

Billy Mills "Fibber McGee and Molly" orchestra contained two proud new fathers this week--Freddie Stults and Earl Evans, both saxophone players in the band, were passing out the cigars to celebrate the arrival over the weekend of baby daughters.

TWO GUEST STARS

Jeanette MacDonald, red-headed and lovely member of the movie colony, and Frank Morgan, radio's "most charming liar" will share the spotlight on the Sunday broadcast of "Radio Hall of Fame". Also on the program will be the nightclub and recording favorites, the Milt-Herth Trio, as well as Paul Whiteman, his orchestra and chorus. Deems Taylor emcees and Glenn Riggs announces.

SENTIMENTAL GILDIE

M-O-T-H-E-R-E, spells the nicest person in the whole world and Throckmorton P. Gildersleeve is just as sentimental about her as anybody, but he's not going to let the political opposition capitalize on Mother's Day. The fact that some persons try to in order to bring about his defeat in the mayoralty campaign is the great man's big beef during the Sunday, episode of "The Great Gildersleeve".

PIANO FEATURE

Saidenberg and Rebner, du-piano team, will be highlighted on the May 17 broadcast of "Top of the Evening" when they play their arrangement of "Amor, Amor", the rumba hit from "Broadway Rhythm". The King's Men, the Ken Darby Chorus and the voice of Sally will also contribute to the musical program.

SAD EXPERIENCE

Saddest experience in the world for a radio producer is the "bird in hand" that flies the coop, and that's exactly what's happening to Lee Cooley these days. His show,

"Double or Nothing" has a "natural" right in the control booth for its May 19 broadcast when it salutes the 100th anniversary of telegraphy by S. F. B. Morse. Morse's grandnephew, Samuel Phoenix Morse, is the engineer on "Double or Nothing," but radio union rules prevent his appearing on the show.

Ed Sullivan's major project these days is securing entertainment for New York's Halloran Hospital where servicemen are on the mend, and he picks up his talent wherever he finds it. Twenty-four hours after Eddie Cantor arrived in New York, Sullivan had his whole troupe signed for an appearance. The two had just run into each other that day on 52nd Street.

Few radio listeners to the Durante-Moore program know that Umbrigo, Durante's "campaign manager" for his scriptural presidential campaign, is really a ed with all sorts of merry-mak-

Ruggles Bequest Assures Expansion of Berger Hospital

CITY INVESTS IN WAR BONDS PENDING PEACE

Addition To Be Constructed When Building Material Is Released

NEW EQUIPMENT ASSURED

Present Plans Call For Redecoration, Purchase Of Furniture

Expansion of Berger hospital is assured by a $16,833.86 bequest of Miss Elizabeth Ruggles. All of the bonds given to the hospital by Miss Ruggles have been sold. Pending the time when building material will be available the city has invested $10,000 of the hospital bequest in series G United States War Bonds to be used as a fund for the erection of a new wing for the hospital. The balance of the bequest will be spent to buy equipment.

Plans have been made for painting and redecorating the hospital interior and for purchase of some new furniture.

Miss Elizabeth Ruggles was a native of Circleville and lived on East Main street in the house now known as the Defenbaugh Funeral Home.

When the hospital was first started Miss Ruggles donated the X-ray machine which at that time cost approximately $1500.

She died in Pasadena, Cal., about three years ago.

Berger hospital, which is a municipal institution, was named for the late Frank Berger who left a bequest of $30,000 to start a hospital if the city would match his bequest within a certain specified time. Two days before the deadline city council passed the necessary legislation and Berger hospital became a reality.

The hospital was dedicated in 1930 and at that time was recognized as one of the best small hospitals in the state.

RED CROSS PUTS $50 IN CAMP COUNCIL FUND

Pickaway County Chapter of the American Red Cross has voted to give $50 to assist in the work of the Camp and Hospital Council, following a report of Mrs. John Boggs, chairman of the Camp and Hospital Council committee. Mrs. Boggs reported findings of the Central Buckeye Camp and Hospital Council at the Enlisted Men's Service club, Lockbourne Army Air Base. She listed the articles needed for the pleasure and comfort of both the able-bodied and the hospitalized men.

The Pickaway County Council camp and hospital service committee made its first visit to the Air Base Monday and will have a meeting with the representatives of other clubs and organizations Monday night in the local Red Cross rooms.

Mrs. John Boggs, chairman, Mrs. Harry Heffner and Miss Marvonne Howard were the members who attended the meeting at Lockbourne.

Pickaway county council is a member of the district council composed of councils in Columbus, Lancaster, Delaware, London and Marysville.

The committee would like to hear from any club or organization willing to donate cookies weekly for the station hospital.

Musical instruments are much in demand at the base and Pickaway county council is responsible for a piano, guitar, banjo and ukulele now being used there. Many other instruments could be used.

NEW LIFE RAFT
NEW YORK, N. Y. — A new 20-man "life kraft" completely equipped with food supplies and even a morale kit is the latest answer to the horrors of torpedoed ships. Demonstrated for first time by the Coast Guard near New York, the new all-metal raft is a virtual ship in itself, with cooking facilities, sails and canopy for the men. When an emergency takes place, the "Kraft" is automatically released from the ship by devices which preclude the necessity of lashing it to the rigging.

POST-WAR U. S. BASES

A House Naval Affairs subcommittee, headed by Representative Edward Hebert of Louisiana, which recently returned from an inspection tour of United States bases in South America, has made three major recommendations in a report to Congress:

1. Permanent acquisition of British bases in the Caribbean area.

2. Continued operation of eight American military and naval bases in Brazil after the war.

3. The granting to Brazil, and other friendly neighbors in South America, of small surplus warships—destroyers, cutters and patrol boats, which we will not need after the war but which will be useful to South American nations for coast patrol and trade purposes.

Hebert brought out in his report that these surplus vessels could be granted to our South American neighbors in exchange for bases.

NOTE—The first Hebert recommendation, regarding permanent acquisition of British bases, was cancelled for the time being by Churchill's London remark in which he opposed relinquishing British bases in the Caribbean.
